-----

The modern packing house is, in reality, a food factory.

Canning tongue.

A plunger stuffs the meat from cylinder into cans.

Potting meats. Seeing how easily a lid is placed on some things.

Inspecting and placing solder over air hole.

Removing air from cans by vacuum and soldering.

Placing cans in steam retorts where meat is cooked.

Labeling and wrapping.

Chopping meat preparatory to making sausage.

Then ground and a little spice added.

The birth of a sausage.

Something to do with links, but nothing to do with golf.

The sausage is smoked to give the desired flavor.

An appetizing result.

Hogs hair being woven into rope.

The first step seems to be backward, but never mind, the rope goes on just the same.

And the Cardings make sitting easy, especially in an auto cushion.

The manufacturing of butterine is done with the most scrupulous cleanliness.

The oil is run into a truck and placed in chill room to harden after which it is pressed to remove the oil.

The oil is called Oleo to which other oils are added such as peanut and cocoanut.

Pasteurizing milk.

Mixing oils and milk.

After churning, the flakes are thoroughly washed, dipped, out by cheese cloth into truck, covered with salt and placed in cooler over night.

Working the butter after which it is made into forms and wrapped.
